CONDITION OF PIUS X. IS WORSE

BULLETIN.

ROME, April 9 (5 p. m.)—Pope Pius X. had a fainting fit this afternoon which lasted two hours. It was rumored that he was sinking rapidly, but Vatican physicians denied this, saying that the Pontiff was not materially worse, and that there was no cause for immediate anxiety. They said that the fainting fit did not indicate that the maladies afflicting the Pope had made any marked progress.

ROME, April 9.—The serious condition of Pope Pius X was aggravated this afternoon by asthma.

This, in addition to pronounced indications that the Pontiff is also a victim of bright's disease, give cause for added alarm to those watching at the bedside of the supreme head of the Catholic Church.

His Holiness had much difficulty in breathing this afternoon, his heart action being very feeble.

His Holiness showed slight improvement before noon, but the relief was declared by the attending physicians to be only temporary.

Immediately afterward all the cardinals and papal ambassadors in Rome were summoned to the sick room, a proceeding which gave rise to the report that the Pontiff was dying.

The extreme age of the sick man militates against hope of recovery. Pope Pius ... (Guiseppe Sarto) was born on June 2, 1835. Dr. Amici, who spent the night in a room adjoining that occupied by the Pontiff, and Dr. Machiafava, admit the condition of the prelate is "extremely grave."

Complications of Ailments.

His Holiness is suffering from a complication of ailments. In addition to an affliction of the throat muscles and a gouty affection of the right hand, the Pope sustained a nervous breakdown.

During the morning 3,000 pilgrims from Treviso gathered in the Vatican grounds beneath the windows of the sick room and prayed for the deliverance of the Pontiff. These were the pilgrims whom Pope Pius was to have welcomed yesterday. The inability to extend his welcome and blessing to the pilgrims worried the Pope and added to the pains which he was already suffering.

While the pilgrims knelt in the Piazza di San Petro, a sudden rain and hail storm blew up. Men and women knelt with uncovered heads, and did not cease their devotions. The Pontiff was distributed by the severe thunder peals which accompanied the squall.

WILSON DEFIES JAPAN

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The federal government, under the present administration, will not interfere with State rights in any manner whatever, nor will it dictate to any State what law should or should not be made.

Following an extended conference with Secretary of State Bryan, President Wilson made this position very clear to Congressman Baker of California today.

The California Legislature has a bill pending denying the right of aliens to hold property. Japan protested to Secretary Bryan against the bill.

The Japanese ambassador's representations were to the effect that passage of this act would be construed as a violation of treaty rights.

Japan Will Retaliate.

TOKIO, April 9.—All the leading newspapers make lengthy editorial comment on the land ownership bill pending in the California legislature. They urge the withdrawal of Japanese participation in the Panama-Pacific Exposition immediately the bill passes, as well as retaliation directed against American goods in Japan.

Count Okuma, the former foreign minister, and other leaders advise conservatism. All authorities concede that the passage of the bill will seriously injure American interests.

LEGISLATURE ASKED TO AUTHORIZE PROBE OF STRIKE SITUATION

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company is willing to make a few concessions to its 2,200 union operators, but the operators' representatives stand firm for the entire list of demands which was submitted to President Spalding of the company, according to latest information this afternoon.

The union representatives came out smiling at 12:30 from the divided hearing which had been given them and the company officials by the strike committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce at Young's Hotel.

The Chamber of Commerce committee worked desperately today to avert the threatened strike. They finally secured an agreement from each side to ask the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration to postpone from 2 o'clock until 3:30 the board hearing on the strike issue.

COMPANY'S REPLY TO DEMANDS DELAYED.

This meant that drastic strike action was put off by that much time because the company was scheduled to give an answer to the union demands at the hearing and it was feared an unfavorable answer meant a strike. With this time gained the Chamber of Commerce committee went at the job harder than ever.

The Chamber committee included President James J. Storrow, Thomas B. Fitzpatrick, William C. Ewing and Secretary James A. McKibbon. They began their session at Young's at 9 a. m., sat until 5 o'clock, adjourned for breakfast, then resumed session at 9. By 1 p. m. they had been in practically uninterrupted sitting for ten hours.

With the Chamber committee were President Spalding, Vice-President E. K. Hall and Former Congressman Samuel L. Powers, counsel.

In another room were union representatives. They included International Vice-President D. M. Bugnlazo, President Annie Malloy of the local union and fifteen girls comprising the executive board.

Proceedings Are Secret.

There was much coming and going of the Chamber of Commerce men from company representatives and union representatives. All proceedings was as secret as possible.

The Legislature took a hand in the telephone crisis today. An order was introduced for appointment of a legislative committee to investigate the strike situation.

Meanwhile the telephone company kept on importing expert "hello girls" from outside to serve as strike-breakers. One hundred and fifty came from Pittsburgh at 10:30 and eighty came from Philadelphia. These made a total of 642 strike-breakers arriving yesterday and today. The new ones were quartered at the Hotels Brunswick and Oxford.

The order for legislative investigation of the telephone trouble was introduced by Representative Thomas W. White of Newton, Republican floor leader of the House, following a conference of leaders in both branches.

The order was introduced with the consent of President Greenwood of the Senate and Speaker Cushing of the House of Representatives. It was the first step in a determined effort of the leaders of the Legislature to prevent a strike if possible, and, if a strike is declared, to bring about a speedy settlement.

Legislative Order.

The order was as follows:

Ordered—That the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives be authorized to appoint a committee consisting of two members of the Senate and three members of the House to consider the situation brought about by the threatened strike of the telephone employes and report to the Legislature from time to time such recommendations as they may deem expedient.

The order was referred to the Committee on Rules.

For full detailed stories on the wage dispute between the telephone company and its operators, see page 6.

Europe Plans to Form League to Keep Masterpieces

By CHARLES HENRY MELTZER.

PARIS, April 8.—The first steps have been taken for the organization of the International European Defence League to prevent the exportation of medieval and artistic masterpieces to America.

For years the acquisitive propensities of wealthy and enlightened Americans like J. P. Morgan and Otto Kahn have caused great anxiety in Europe. No limit could be set, without some action by the European governments, to the increasing power of American millionaires to strip the Old World of its cherished art treasures.

Now a committee has been formed, which, I hear, will eventually include, if it does not include already, officials like President von Bode of the Royal Museum of Berlin, Dr. Exner of the Imperial Museum of Vienna; the president of the Imperial Museums Society of St. Petersburg, the authorities in charge of the Paris Arts and Trades Conservatory, the South Kensington Museum and the new German Museum at Munich.

BRANDEIS SAYS NEW HAVEN DEFIES CREDIT PRINCIPLES

Louis D. Brandeis vigorously attacked the business management of the New York, New Haven & Hartford and Boston & Maine Railroads before the Boston Credit Men's Association at Young's Hotel.

He discussed the passing of dividends on Boston & Maine stock, and a reduction in New Haven dividends, saying:

"This has happened because of the defiance of every law that you credit men act upon in deciding whether or not to give credit to individuals.

In conclusion he referred to the buying by the New Haven from 11 united Gas Improvement Company of trolley properties in Rhode Island for $25,000,000, investigation showing, he said, that these properties were worth about $6,000,000.

DR. FRIEDMANN TREATS 125 AT PROVIDENCE

Through the night persons kept coming to seek treatment. One woman actually forced her way into the doctor's room.

"The most pathetic of all the applicants was a little Providence girl on crutches. She hobbled over the marble floor of the lobby and up the stairways, hoping she could be treated and helped by the German physician.

Dr. Friedmann planned to treat as many patients at the State sanatorium as his present stock of serum would permit.

Accompanying Dr. Friedmann from the hotel today were his secretary, C. de Vinal Hundt, State Senator Albert H. Sayles, Dr. Maurice Sturm of New York City and Dr. W. L. Harris.

At 6:30 applicants were at the hotel to see Dr. Friedmann. Others kept coming.

K. OF C. OF SIX STATES HUNT AHERN

Members of the Knights of Columbus in six States have been asked to join in the hunt for Frederick E. Ahern, the young Cohasset business man who disappeared at Dover, N. H., last Sunday afternoon as completely as if the ground had opened and swallowed him.

Ahern is twenty-six. He had never tasted liquor or tobacco. He was the sole owner of the retail coal business operated at Cohasset under the name of "Lincoln Bros." He was also the local agent of the Adams Express Company.

He had been married less than a year and a half to a Cohasset girl whom he had known since childhood. Happy at home, apparently prosperous in business, Fred Ahern had no reason, his friends can think of, for dropping out of sight.

Members of the family today asked the AMERICAN to publish the missing man's description:

Age—Twenty-six.
Height—5 feet 6 inches.
Weight—135 pounds.
Eyes—Dark blue, set well back and topped by heavy black eyebrows.
Hair—Black; derby.
Overcoat—Black, with satin facing.
Suit—A dark gray.
Shoes—Tan.

Unless he shaves every day, the young man's beard—he is usually smooth shaven—is heavy. He carried an open-face gold watch, on a gold chain, to which was attached a Knights of Columbus charm.

Ahern is one of the members of the family of the late Peter Ahern, a much respected gardener of the Green Hill section of Nantasket, who died there last August. The family consists of Mrs. Ahern, four sons in their early manhood and seven daughters.

WIFE ADMIRED AYRES AS MAN AND PASTOR

Revelations of her home life with her husband at the time Rev. William B. Ayers, pastor of the Park and Dowas Congregational Church of Wollaston, was their lodger, were made by Mrs. Helen Willett Boynton on cross-examination today in the $25,000 alienation suit brought by her husband, Chester A. Boynton of Revere, against the clergyman.

Mrs. Boynton admitted that she "admires" the minister and that she did not love her husband when she married him. She said she married him to "get away from her home." Asked if it might be called a marriage of convenience, she replied: "Well, possibly."

The pretty wife said she "enjoyed seeing the minister in the pulpit." Asked if she "knew that he had been married three times," she said she did not. The question was the first intimation since the trial opened that the pastor's past career is to be considered in the trial.

Wife Accuses Husband.

Mrs. Boynton accused her husband of hugging and kissing Miss Flora Sass, a pretty choir girl in the Wollaston church. The wife said she had made three trips into Boston with the pastor and had once selected dresses for him to send to his mother and sisters. On another occasion she and a woman friend went with him to see a play in Boston.

Mrs. Boynton was cross-examined by Attorney Herty James, of counsel for her husband. She admitted that she had ceased to live with Boynton as his wife since August, 1911, on account of alleged habits she discovered.

Mrs. Boynton said she had been a Baptist but had joined the Park and Downs Church after hearing Mr. Ayers preach. She had gone to church with her husband. She admitted her admiration for Ayers as a man of honor and splendid character.

To Mr. James' query, Mrs. Boynton retorted with some spirit:

"I tell this jury that neither in my home nor any other place did I have any private conversation with Rev. Mr. Ayers. I have said and now I repeat it that I admired him as a preacher and ass man. In my home he was the soul of honor."

Couldn't Draw the Line.

Q.—Did you admire him as the preacher or as the man? A.—I couldn't draw any lines between the preacher in the pulpit and the man as I found Mr. Ayers to be in his daily life.

Q.—Had you a feeling of resentment against your husband? A.—Yes, I had.

Q.—Have you brought any action for divorce against him? A.—I have not.

Q.—Does your feeling of resentment against your husband influence you in your testimony here? A.—It does not.

Q.—Did you make any objection to your husband's being in the church with Miss Sass. A.—No.

Q.—Had you ever told Miss Sass you didn't want her in the house. A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever have a talk with Mr. Boynton about hugging and kissing Miss Sass in the parlor. A.—Yes. The next day.

Q.—When your husband went away in the morning, how many times did you have breakfast with your husband? A.—I couldn't say.

Q.—Did you get Mr. Boynton's breakfast all the time? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you get Mr. Ayers' breakfast? A.—Yes.

Q.—When? A.—About 8 o'clock.

Q.—Was there anybody in the house at that time besides you and Mr. Ayers? A.—No; not always. But my mother was there very often.

Q.—You never ate breakfast with Mr. Ayers on any occasion in your husband's absence? A.—No, never.

A VALUABLE SUGGESTION
IMPORTANT TO EVERYONE

It is now conceded by physicians that the kidneys should have more attention, as they control the other organs to a remarkable degree and do a tremendous amount of work in removing the poisons and waste matter from the system by filtering the blood.

During the winter months, especially, when we live an indoor life, the kidneys should receive some assistance when needed, as we take less exercise, drink less water and often eat more rich, heavy food, thereby forcing the kidneys to do more work than nature intended. Evidence of kidney trouble, such as lame back, inability to hold urine, smarting or burning, brick-dust or sediment, sallow complexion, rheumatism, may be weak or irregular heart action, warns you that your kidneys require help immediately to avoid more serious trouble.

An herbal medicine containing no minerals or opiates has the most healing influence. An ideal herbal compound that has had most remarkable success as a kidney and bladder remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by mail, absolutely free. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention the Boston Daily American.

Lexington Women Mourn Only Dog D. A. R. Member

Members of Lexington Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, are today mourning the death of Princess Daz ma Wanda Brunhilde Echrenbreitenstein, the only dog member of the organization.

The dog died at the home of her owner, Mrs. Edward Harold Crosby, at No. 07 Mt. Vernon street, Beacon Hill.

The dog was made an honorary member of Lexington Chapter not long before Mrs. Crosby refused an offer of $1,000 for her on the canine's twelfth birthday anniversary two weeks ago.

FRAULEIN ZOCH FRIEDMANN'S GUIDING LIGHT

BERLIN, April 9.—Fraulein Zoch, the one person in all the world who shares with Dr. Friedrich Friedmann the secret of his turtle serum cure for tuberculosis, is now en route to New York to set aright the difficulties of the bacteriologist with members of the medical profession and sceptics who hesitate in placing confidence in his discovery.

The young woman—she is just twenty-eight years old—is said to be possessed of a marvelous personality. Some claim she has hypnotic powers. She is wealthy in her own right, is by turns quick of speech and extremely taciturn.

Dr. Friedmann called her "Mein fuhrendes licht"—my guiding light—and such she always seemed to be to him.

Visitors at his laboratories, those who sought data on his discovery, frequently found her a buffet that kept them far away from the young physician.

Dr. Friedmann did not decide upon his trip to America until after many and long discussions with the remarkable young woman. She explained to him a method of procedure, discussed its merits and agreed with him upon modifications.

MISS DODGE RAN AWAY TO ESCAPE AN IDLE LIFE

LONDON, April 9.—Reappearing almost as mysteriously as she vanished, Miss Lucy Winslow Dodge, granddaughter of the late John Bigelow of New York, who had been missing for five days, returned to the home of her mother, Mrs. Lionel Dodge Guest, No. 44 Seymour street, Portman square.

Miss Dodge communicated by telephone with her mother, who is now confined to bed as a result of the mental anguish she underwent. Mrs. Guest pleaded with the girl, and her entreaties were supplemented by those of the stepfather of Miss Dodge.

"There is no love affair interwoven in the disappearance of my daughter," said Mrs. Guest earlier in the day. She never seriously considered taking so important a step as matrimony, and we don't feel at all apprehensive on that score."

Mrs. Guest declared her daughter had frequently expressed a desire to do something useful in life, to get away from an existence that palls dements only of a social nature. The girl, wearied of her really idle life, wished to make her own living.

WADLIN REPORT SHOWS BOSTON MORE 'BOOKISH'

Boston is getting more and more "bookish." This is shown in the annual report made public today of Horace G. Wadlin, librarian of the Boston Public Library. Bostonians read 132,608 more books last year than they did in the preceding twelve months. The report also brings out some other interesting "book facts." Here are some of them:

The West End is the most literary section of Boston.

Children are reading more books than they were ever known to read before.

In some of the branch stations books on music and composers and volumes in Yiddish and Italian are in great demand.

Less fiction was purchased by the library last year than in the preceding twelve months.

Generally speaking, the "bookworms" may be said to be on the rapid increase in Boston. The total number of books read last year is in all likelihood more than 5,000,000.

QUICKLY STOPS THE WORST BACKACHE

Makes Kidney Troubles, Bladder Disorders and Rheumatic Pains Vanish.

If you suffer with backaching kidney trouble, have disagreeable bladder and urinary disorders, or are tortured with rheumatism, stiff joints and its heart-wrenching pains, the new discovery, Croxone, will quickly and surely relieve all such troubles.

Croxone is the most wonderful remedy yet devised for ridding the system of uric acid and driving out all the poisonous impurities which cause such troubles. It is entirely different from all other remedies. It acts on the principle of cleaning out the poisons and removing the cause.

It sinks right in through the walls, membranes and linings, like water in a sponge, neutralizes, dissolves and makes the kidneys sift out and filter away all the uric acid and poisons from the blood, and leaves the kidneys and urinary organs clean, strong, healthy and well.

It matters not how long you have suffered, how old you are, or what you have used, the very principle of Croxone is such that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. There is nothing else on earth like it. It starts to work the minute you take it and relieves you the first time you use it.

If you suffer with pains in your back, and sides, or have any signs of kidney, bladder trouble, or Neuma-tism, such as puffy swellings under the eyes or in the feet and ankles, if you are nervous, tired and run down, or bothered with urinary disorders, Croxone will quickly relieve you of your misery. An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if it fails in a single case.

OPEN TRIAL OF TRIO FOR WRECK AT WESTPORT

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., April 9.—The Superior Court resumed hearing of arguments on motions and demurrers by the attorneys for former Vice-President Henry J. Horn, former General Superintendent B. B. Pollock, former Superintendent of the Shore Line Division C. N. Woodward and Laurence J. Carmalt, in charge of maintenance of way, all New Haven Railroad officials, charged jointly with manslaughter in connection with the fatal Westport wreck, October 3.

Homer S. Cummings, attorney for the defense, announced that they were prepared to file an extra affidavit on the motion for separate trials. The affidavit is the statement that the duty of Mr. Carmalt, engineer of maintenance, had nothing to do with the duties of the three accused.

Mr. Judson said that if the Superior Court took the view of the counsel for the defence it would mean that it would be impossible to hold officials responsible and there would be no protection for the public. He said he would show facts in evidence which involved all these men. Some excitement was caused at this point when States Attorney Judson said that counsel for the defence are employed by the New Haven road.

Instantly all counsel were on their feet with protests. The court ruled in favor of separate trials.

'OWN STORY' BY PHONE GIRL ON ARDUOUS WORK ON TOLL LINE DETAIL

The AMERICAN today publishes the second chapter of "My Own Story," by Miss Mae Matthews, a Boston telephone girl, who is telling the day-by-day experiences in the life of an operator here. Miss Matthews today describes the arduous work of a toll line operator and also shows that a telephone girl has much to withstand in the way of fault-finding from subscribers who do not realize the difficulties of an operator's position. Miss Matthews writes:

My Own Story—II.
The Experiences of a Boston Telephone Girl.
By MISS MAE MATTHEWS,
Member Executive Board, Telephone Operators' Union.

Little does the public dream of the real hair that harass the telephone girl. I wonder if it can be told in mere words—the actual story of her daily experience. You see, there is so much mental as well as physical strain, and there are so many factors entering into her hardships that would be inexplicable to the layman.

You fortunate women who sit at home and give your household orders through the telephone, do you know how unjust you often are when you fret—as an operator, blaming her for inattention, when she is straining every nerve and keeping every bit of her mind in action to serve you and the hundred others waiting on the switchboard?

I wish you could see us as we really are, and as we really are, being at our post, trying, with all our might to get your numbers just as quickly as we can, and keeping back our feelings, when you are sometimes sharp and unjust in reproof.

To begin with, do you realize how many of our faculties are keenly alert every minute while we are at our work?

Just think of the senses we must employ, actively, without cessation! Ears, eyes, touch, voice—we must have them all going if we would meet the demands upon us.

Our hands we must use continually, and our fingers are kept flying from one place to another, manipulating the keys and plugs. Our brains, too, are kept at a high pitch of activity, for we have much to think about besides the board before us. This switchboard, complex though it is, does not constitute the boundary of our realm.

The telephone girl, indeed, is a little directory of information by the time she has operated a few months—her brain is filled with names and numbers and business firms, with facts and figures and important details related to the most unusual happenings in the land.

Take the toll operator, for example. Do you imagine all she has to do is to answer calls and take numbers and attend to the mere switchboard duties? Far from it. She must be a thorough student of geography—she must know her territory like a book. She must understand not only one routing, ... several. More of this I will tell you later, in connection with my own experience.

And now, to go back to the story where I left it yesterday, told of being on the main exchange in Boston, with my own switchboard, and the demand upon me is th. hundreds of calls per hour.

I had not been there long before I realized that I was simply part of the mechanism, that I was not to recognize my own feelings or my own wishes or any sense of fatigue. I was there to do duty, and I must keep my faculties alert and attend strictly to the calls that crowded upon me.

After one year I felt that I wanted to leave, so I changed over to the toll, where everything is entirely different. Here it was practically beginning all over again. I became again a student, for I had to go over my geography and learn the different routings to get the different places. I had to understand at least three different routings, so in case there was trouble with one I could use another.

Tax Upon Strength.

Here at the toll the board was altogether different from the one I was familiar with. It took me almost a month to become fully acquainted with it.

The toll operating is harder in the Summer time than at other seasons, for then people are away from home and sending messages and from the country to town and town to country. Much business ...es, of course, done by the telephone ...

...ot every girl can take ... toll position. It requires special training and special aptitude for the demands. I found them most wearing and exhausting during the two years I acted as toll operator.

Speed and compactness—these are the two factors that make the work of the telephone girl in almost any department a drain upon her strength. No wonder a girl absolutely requires the relief periods, when she may rest her tired faculties, if only for a short time.

It is all very complex, the work of the telephone girl. I can't explain it without going into technicalities that wouldn't interest the reader, so I'll just tell my own story so any girl may understand it, no matter what her trade or work.

One of the greatest trials of our work is the supervising—I don't mean the outside tests, because, of course, we know they are necessary and right. But the "overhead" supervising, as we call it, which is done by the chief operator. You see, there is so much supervising done that a girl can't help growing nervous and distressed.

Have to Stand Abuse.

There is the regular supervisor who stands near and goes back and forth, watching the girls; that isn't so bad, for we expect it. Then there is the testing done by the men employed for that purpose, in the line. Then there is the thing that almost makes nervous wrecks of one of the girls—the "overhead supervising" of the chief operator, as I described. This is done at any time, and the girl always knows when it is happening.

And now, about the subscribers. How does their behavior affect the girls? Well, how do you think it would affect you, reader, whoever you are, to be sworn at and ... and insulted, and yet have to hold your tongue, never answering back, except in some technical phrase?

The telephone girl is absolutely restricted in this, of course, to certain set phrases. She simply repeats these in as pleasant a voice as possible, though a very storm of abuse is coming at her over 1 e wire.

After a girl has her relief utterly spoiled by some such experience, she has just been listening to a tide of abuse, perhaps, and when she go for her period of relaxation she hasn't the spirit to enjoy it, and can only sit brooding and suffering over the stinging remarks hurled at her by those who do not understand. Perhaps she flings herself down and gives way to tears, and when her fifteen minutes are up she is exhausted and wholly unfit to take up the burden again.

INTENSE ITCHING AND BURNING

Breaking Out on Face and Hands, Began with Red Pimples. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In 2 Weeks Face and Hands Clear.

Westford, Mass.—"The first of my trouble began four years ago with a breaking out on the face and hands. It began with red pimples especially upon my face. The itching and burning were so intense that I had no rest, which was very bad, because the pimples broke still worse. I was very much annoyed with the itching and burning feeling and needed sleep badly. I have tried many different kinds of soap and ointment but they did not seem to help me a bit.

"One day I happened to see the advertisement about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. You would be surprised how much good they did even in a single night. I washed the part irritated with Cuticura Soap and then applied the Cuticura Ointment lightly. Then I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and it was not two weeks before my face and hands were clear from all that disease." (Signed) Miss H. M. Bicknell, Oct. 12, 1912.

For washing poor complexions, red, rough hands, and dry, thin, and falling hair, as well as burns, scalds, cuts, wounds, sores, chaps, eczemas and rashes, Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston." Cuticura Soap shaves and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

TONIGHT! TAKE A "CASCARET" SURE

No Sick Headache, Bilious Stomach, or Constipated Bowels by Morning.

Turn the rascals out—the headache, the biliousness, the indigestion, the dirt, sour stomach and foul gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse and regulate your stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and that misery-making gas; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from any drug store means a clear head, sweet stomach and clean, healthy liver and bowel action for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

MORE STRIKE-BREAKERS ARRIVE

Pittsburgh and Philadelphia Each Send Large Quota of Girl Operators.

Pending the crisis in the telephone strike situation today, the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company brought 230 more strike-breakers de luxe to the city, continued to comb the country, even to the Far West, for more operators, and took other measures to meet the threatened walk-out.

The Washington express brought 150 girls from Pittsburg and the West, in its first section, arriving at Back Bay Station at 10:30.

Seventy of the entire batch went to the Brunswick. The other 160 were escorted to the Hotel Oxford.

Estimated Number is 642.

The reticence of the telephone and hotel people made it difficult to figure the total number of strike-breakers brought here yesterday and today. But the estimate up to this noon at different hotels was:

Copley-Plaza	350
Somerset	25
Copley Square	25
Oxford	160
Parker House	12
Brunswick	70
Total	642

The term "strike-breakers de luxe" has been applied to these out-of-town girls, because they are, bar none, the most luxurious living set of strike-breakers Boston ever saw.

Some Girls' Rooms $10 a Day.

The mere names of the hotels at which they are being quartered tells the story.

They are occupying rooms ranging as high at $10 a day at the Copley-Plaza and the Somerset. Nor are they jammed in five or six in a room. Three to a room is the limit. Two to a room is the rule. The girls like this better than "solitaire" quarters.

They get fine hotel food, free laundry, music with their meals, vaudeville the first evening they were in town and promises of sight-seeing tours about town. All this in addition to the $25 cash bonus for coming here and maximum wages.

But the girls are jealously guarded by middle-aged matrons, telephone inspectors, telephone officials, Pinkerton detectives and Boston policemen.

It was reported yesterday that the company had asked Police Commissioner O'Meara for police protection for its strike-breakers. This was denied at first. But the presence of several officers at the Back Bay station when the strike-breakers' train came in spoke for itself.

Pickets Repulsed.

Reporters, union pickets and others who tried to address the arrivals were prevented more or less abruptly by this multiple guard.

In the lobby of the Hotel Oxford, for instance, a reporter and two union pickets who were talking to the two strike-breakers were ordered out.

When the Pittsburg and Western delegation of 150 arrived at 10:30 the detectives and telephone escort lined the girls up on the platform and said:

"Stick together, girls! Don't be afraid and don't talk to anyone!"

Then the long line, by twos and threes, moved along Dartmouth street and Huntington avenue to the Oxford.

Tech Boys Repulsed.

When the second batch arrived, and several of them were guided to the Hotel Brunswick, there was a squad of enthusiastic "Tech" students on the hotel steps. The students were eager to carry the girls' suitcases and take themselves otherwise agreeable, but the escort were too alert. The company had sent out a strong force of office clerks by this time, and there were scores of uniformed and non-uniformed escorts.

The "Tech" boys have been getting much diversion in one way and another. When girls arriving yesterday were quartered in the Copley-Plaza Hotel the boys in the Technology engineering laboratories, across Trinity place, wig-wagged to the girls. A remonstrance from the hotel management to the Dean brought reply that, if the management and the guests did their part, they probably won't have no trouble from the students.

Boys Wire 15 Cars Together.

The telephone company met trouble in Malden early today when a gang of boys wired together fifteen automobiles which had been "parked" in a vacant lot in the rear of the Malden exchange.

The boys secured several spools o fine but strong wire, which they wound in and out and all about the autos. Wheels were wired to wheels and bodies bodies until the fifteen cars were a mess of tangled wires. The boys also committed minor damage to the cars.

Three or four chauffeurs, who came on the boys just before dawn, were greeted with a shower of stones and lumps of coal. The boys were dispersed and, up to noon time, the cursed chauffeurs were cutting and untangling wires.

"BREAKERS" JOLLY AT BREAKFAST AT THE COPLEY-PLAZA

In the grill room of the Copley-Plaza 345 strike-breaking girls from New York had breakfast shortly after 8 o'clock today. They were a laughing, bright and breezy set. Strikes or threatened strikes seemed to satisfy them even as much as the served-in-style breakfast. The waiters, in full dress, never beheld before the like at the Copley-Plaza or any other million-dire-class hotel as that at breakfast today.

The hello girl strike-breakers were orderly. In their table etiquette they were for the most part to the manner born. But they perdated in their laughs and giggles and their breezy conversation. The pictures in the newspapers brought more laughs and giggles.

This was the menu for the girls and they did full justice to it, some of the waiters being kept on the run until the close of the breakfast hours:

Oat Meal	Hominy
Scrambled Eggs	Sausages
Tea	Coffee

LOBBYISTS APPEAR IN FORCE TO TRY TO KILL CASSIDY BILL IN SENATE

A veritable army of lobbyists swarmed to the State House today. They were sent there to kill the Cassidy bill to stop the false labelling of receptacles containing articles of food. The bill comes up in the Senate this afternoon on the question of being passed to be engrossed.

The work against the bill today was rapid, for the bill was the second matter on the calendar. Senators were constantly being called to the telephone and out into the corridor. Every effort was made to get a sufficient number of votes to kill the bill.

A sensational feature in connection with the fight against the bill was the presence on Beacon Hill today of several agents of the Republican State machine.

The big packing companies opposed to the bill have appealed to the Republican State machine to help defeat the measure. Some of the G. O. P. leaders have responded. Efforts have also been made by the packing interests to get some of the Democratic Senators to oppose the measure.

The Senate has already gone on record in favor of the bill. The House passed it by an overwhelming vote. The Senate, after passing the measure to engrossment by a voice vote, without any division, reconsidered its action for some unknown reason.

Contest Over "Joker."

Senator Walter E. McLane of Fall River will lead the opposition to the bill on the floor of the Senate. He will attempt to push through a "joker" in the form of an amendment to provide that no prosecutions shall be made under the bill unless it is proved that food products are "knowingly" labelled falsely. This amendment is aimed to kill the purpose of the bill. A similar amendment was offered in the House and that branch rejected it by a decisive vote. Representative John F. Meaney of Blackstone led the fight against the amendment.

What McLane Says of Stand.

Senator McLane was asked the following questions today and made the following replies:

Q.—Do you know that if your amendment prevails and the word "knowingly" is inserted the only effect of the measure will be to reduce the punishment for violation of this law to a fine of not more than $10? A.—I have read the law.

Q.—Do you understand that the effect of your amendment will be to kill the bill? A.—I can read English.

Q.—Do you not believe that if you are opposed to the bill you should fight its passage instead of inserting an amendment that vitiates it? A.—I have read the bill and the law and I know what I am doing.

Senator McLane, who offers the amendment in the Senate, was chairman of the Committee on Liquor Law, which was discharged by the presiding officers of the two legislative branches, after charges had been preferred by the Anti-saloon League that Senator McLane had treated them unfairly and discourteously.

The bill, as it comes up in the Senate and as passed by the House, would simply change the present law relative to the false labelling of receptacles containing food articles, by striking out the word "knowingly." It is generally conceded that it is impossible, under the present law with the word "knowingly" in it, to make any prosecutions, because it is impossible to prove knowledge on the part of a person.

In their efforts to defeat the measure teh lobbyists fighting it have resorted to all sorts of tactics. They have even tried to deceive some of the members of the Senate as to the exact provisions of the bill.

CARRY LIQUOR POSTER FIGHT INTO SUBURBS

Society women of Boston are planning to carry their "poster war on liquor" into every city and town in Greater Boston, according to Mrs. William Tilton. Mrs. Tilton is a member of the committee of women co-operating with the Boston Associated Charities in the anti-liquor crusade. Already the posters have been put up in a number of places in Boston.

Among these poster sites are a number which are not available for ordinary bill posting. One of these is Bulfinch chapel, the premises of a South End manufacturing concern and numerous office windows in the downtown business district.

From Boston the movement is going to spread into the suburbs. Mrs. Tilton said:

"Our step now is to carry the campaign into the suburbs. Mrs. F. B. Harrington is to organize the wives of Back Bay doctors to help her in the Summer resorts this coming season. That will be another branch of the work. This is really a campaign of health education and we have the doctors behind us.

"Mrs. Charles Elliot Guild is covering Milton and Hyde Park. The Social Workers Club are handling the campaign in Cambridge. Mrs. Harrington is working in Essex County. The work will all be divided up and will be thoroughly done everywhere."

'MUST RACE OR YIELD CUP,' SAYS LIPTON

NEW YORK, April 9.—New York Yacht Club has received from Sir Thomas Lipton, the British yachtsman, an unconditional challenge for the America's cup. The message was cabled to the New York club through the Royal Ulster Yacht Club. Sir Thomas Lipton, after sending the challenge, remarked that the cup must now either be defended or yielded. The challenge reads:

I have the honor to inform you that the Royal Ulster Yacht Club has received the following communication from Sir Thomas Lipton: "Although our opinions differ from those of the New York Yacht Club as to the meaning of the deed of gift, in the interests of yachting and with a view to eliminating any possible source of discord I shall be glad if you will inform the New York Yacht Club that I withdraw all stipulations as to the size of the yacht defending the America's cup, and I look forward to a good race with my seventy-five-footer in 1914.

"THOMAS J. LIPTON."

We have the greatest pleasure in transmitting the foregoing, and trust that the New York Yacht Club will share the view of the Royal Ulster Club that Sir Thomas Lipton has solved the difficulty in a satisfactory manner. By separate cablegram I am sending the formal challenge.

E. F. PATTERSON,
Honorable Secretary.

To the question: "Do you think you will win?" the British yachtsman replied:

I must confess frankly I think I shall give the cup a bit of fright. I think I shall raise hopes in its breast that it will see its native soil again, if only for a short time. I am anxious for a race and not for the prize. Some of the best friends I have are in America, and they are anxious to see my Shamrock at Sandy Hook again.

HALT SCHEDULES IN MAINE CASE

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today suspended the operation of schedules until July 17 in what is known as the Bangor & Aroostook case. PLAN TO TEST CANCER TREATMENT UPON 600 HERE

Tests of a new cancer treatment, discovered by Dr. Howard W. Nowell, instructor of pathology in the Boston University School of Medicine, will be made on 600 patients with proved cases of tumor.

Dr. Nowell's discovery was announced at the seventy-third annual meeting of the Massachusetts Homeopathic Society. It is the result of three years' original search.

In brief, the statement as given to the assembled physicians is that Dr. Nowell has found a chemical process for extracting the poison from a human malignant tumor, and with this poison has obtained from rabbits a serum which when mixed with the original poisonous substance in proper proportions, wholly nullifies the poisonous properties of the tumor extract.

The physician declares that it would not be fair to speak of his discovery as an anti-toxin, but believes that eventually it may become as effective as the diphtheria anti-toxins.

How I Darkened My Gray Hair

Lady Gives Simple Home Recipe That She Used to Darken Her Gray Hair.

For years I tried to restore my gray hair to its natural color with the prepared dyes and stains, but none of them gave satisfaction and they were all expensive. I finally ran onto a simple recipe which I mixed at home that gives wonderful results. I gave the recipe, which is as follows, to a number of my friends and they are all delighted with it: To 7 oz. of water add a small box of Barbo Compound, 1 oz. of bay rum and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Use every other day until the hair becomes the required shade, then every ten weeks. It will not only darken the gray hair but removes dandruff and scalp humors, and acts as a tonic to the hair. It is not sticky or greasy, does not rub off and does not color the scalp. You can prepare it at home at very little expense.—Advertisement.

"Tell by the Taste"

There are many kinds of ALE on the market that a man could try.

They are all made with the same ingredients. And still they differ.

Alley's Ale is also made just like the others—but there is a distinction in its flavor that puts it in a class by itself.

The temperature of the brew—the time allowed in the settling tanks—the ageing in wood casks—all differ from the process of other brewers.

The malted barley is specially selected and tested—the hops are chosen for their blending quality—the water is pure.

The combined results of doing the same thing day after day for years are an absolute uniformity of brew.

Alley's Ale is always the same. It has the same flavor today that it had ten years ago. Thousands of people who drink ALE are admirers of Alley's—they like it for what it is—they know it for purity and flavor.*

You may not be getting just the flavor that pleases you in ALE. Surely it isn't going to take much effort to try Alley's Ale at the next opportunity. It may prove to be the very ALE for which you have been looking.

If the taste pleases you, the question of purity need not enter your mind. Every precaution that intelligence can suggest in cleanliness is part of the regular routine of the Alley's Ale brewing.

The taste never varies—if you like it today, you will always like it.

QUESTION LIVERYMAN TODAY IN HUNT FOR EATON POISON CLEW

Developments came thick and fast today in the solution of the mystery surrounding the death by poison of Admiral Eaton, whose widow is now in the Plymouth jail charged with his murder.

These developments were:

The discovery of a promising poison clew by the State police in Everett.

The discovery by the AMERICAN that the marriage of Admiral and Mrs. Eaton took place in the Park Street Church, the Rev. A. Z. Conrad officiating, on July 1, 1906.

The filing of four motions relative to Mrs. Eaton's indictment by her counsel, Attorneys Morse and Geogan.

The discovery by the police that an ounce of arsenic was bought in a Hingham drug store last Summer by John Kerr, who keeps a livery stable near the cottage occupied at Nantasket by Mrs. Eaton.

The mysterious departure from his home in Hingham of James Thom, the nurserymaa whom Admiral Eaton threatened to shoot if he did not keep away from the Eaton home.

State Officer John Scott is working in Everett today tracing a suspicious purchase of arsenic. He said:

"We expect to know today for a certainty if this arsenic was in any way brought to the Eaton home. We have found several other sales which we have run down and found they were legitimate purchases. This one we are working on looks very suspicious.

An official connected with the prosecution of the Eaton death mystery said today:

I have word that the State police have found the most promising clew yet discovered in the case. The person who made this purchase better come forward and make known his identity.

Files Motions Today.

There is a person somewhere from whom the poison used in the killing of Admiral Eaton was obtained. He will surely be discovered. This clew may result in his exposure. It would be better for this person to come forward at once. He must know we are trailing him down and will get him sooner or later. He had better come forward voluntarily and confess the State. The one for whom we are searching must expect to be found out. Every knock on the door must be terrifying to him. It will be much easier for the person if he or she comes out of hiding quickly, than to try to sleep nights knowing in their consciences that a murder may be traced to their door.

Attorney Geogan will file four motions with the Plymouth Court today relative to the indictment of Mrs. Eaton. One of the motions is for a bill of particulars. The second is that the defence be allowed a transcript of the evidence before the Grand Jury and the third that they be furnished by the District Attorney a list of his witnesses before the Grand Jury. The fourth is that the defence be allowed to inspect any exhibits the District Attorney may have.

Learn Date of Marriage.

James Thom of Hingham, a shrubbery dealer, several times questioned by the police in the Eaton investigation, has myteriously disappeared.

Thom admitted visiting at the Eaton home while Mrs. Eaton and her daughter June were living at Assinippi and at Weymouth following the death of the Eaton's adopted son, whom Mrs. Eaton feared the Admiral with poisoning.

The mystery which for weeks has surrounded the time and place of the second marriage of the late Admiral Eaton was cleared today when the AMERICAN discovered the ceremony took place in Park Street Church, July 1, 1906.

Meanwhile state police officers today planned to have a long talk with the liveryman and interview some of the men who were employed by him.

With Admiral Eaton in War Against Spain

By LIEUT. B. B. McG.

A companion in arms of Admiral Eaton, Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner. All rights reserved.

"The Indiana had been nearer the Morro, but about 9 o'clock circled to the eastward with a port helm, leaving the Resolute within the arc of the circle described by the fleet. The Resolute was then turned under a slow bell, and stopped when the Indiana was due west of us, and just outside the Wrecks of the fighting ships. The Gloucester was to the northward and eastward, and nearly off Aguadores.

"As the Maria Teresa appeared the Iowa fired a six pounder and hoisted signal. Within a few seconds of this shot (not more than five or ten) all the Spanish batteries opened, and at the same time the port broadside of the Maria Teresa was discharged. It seemed to me then that all, or nearly all, of these shot and shell were fired at the Indiana, and in the Resolute lay directly in line, the water around the Resolute was alive with the fall of projectiles.

"Before the Vizcaya appeared the Indiana opened fire with her heavy guns and, with screws whitening the water astern, was heading for the Morro.

"As the Vizcaya came out, I distinctly saw one of the Indiana's heaviest shells strike her about midships, and the explosion of this shell was followed by a burst of flame which, for the moment, obscured the after part of the Vizcaya.

"The Vizcaya fired her port battery apparently at the Indiana, for many of the shells struck about and beyond the Resolute, which was then heading east.

"The Oquendo, in coming out, also fired her first broadside at the Indiana, and I could see some of the Indiana's shells strike the Oquendo as she steamed south.

"Following close astern of the Colon and Oquendo came the destroyer Furor, and I distinctly saw her struck by an eight-inch or thirteen-inch shell from the Indiana, which was followed by an explosion and flames on board the Furor.

"The other ships engaged, except the Oregon, and occasionally the Brooklyn, which showed at times to the southward of the other vessels the Resolute being by this time well to the eastward, were hidden in smoke.

"The Spanish officers who were prisoners from Colon and the Vizcaya have since told me that the fire from the Indiana and the Oregon as they passed from the harbor was deadly in its destructiveness, and that although the Colon escaped with small injury, due to her greater speed and being in a measure covered by the other ships, the Vizcaya was hopelessly crippled before she had gone a mile from the Morro.

DR. PEABODY SCORES IDLE MINISTERS

"The ministers of today are showing a tendency to idleness. They are having too much intellectual indulgence. The ministers are reading too many easy books of fiction and are becoming spiritually sluggish. They are not doing their best and are saying 'What's the use?' Don't get discouraged; keep up your spirits."

This is the gist of an address delivered to the Episcopal clergymen of eastern Massachusetts by the Rev. Endicott Peabody, head of the Groton School, at the Diocesan Episcopal convention today in St. Paul's Cathedral.

"There is a tendency on the part of the ministers towards the unreality," said Dr. Peabody. "They are appearing as ministers and seem to like to make themselves a little different from other men. Consequently they are getting out of touch with men. Get in touch with each other. Love one another more. Men nowadays need to be converted every day in the year."

At the business session of the convention this morning Reogre Hill these officers were chosen: Secretary, Rev. Leander C. Manchester, Wollaston; assistant secretary, Rev. Francis G. Webster, Waltham; treasurer, Rev. George J. Prescott, Boston.

Eight delegates were chosen as deputies to the general Episcopal convention, to be held in New York next October. These delegates were instructed to vote against the proposition to change the name of the Protestant Episcopal Church to the American Catholic Church.

The most important event of the convention will be the election of a suffragan bishop to assist Bishop Lawrence.

A Re-print from The Modern Grocer

January 25, 1913 THE MODERN GROCER 9

WHY I PLACED MY FIRST ORDER WITH LARKIN

Written for The Modern Grocer By a Chicago Woman

LAST week the Larkin Company opened its new Chicago branch, making a strong appeal for business in the city and surrounding territory. We are fortunate to be able to present this article, from a Chicago woman, who was won to the Larkin idea by the advertising and by a visit to the plant. We publish her views because they express clearly the consumer's attitude. Before the merchant successfully can compete with mail-order houses, he must know why his customers patronize them. This is the first of a series of articles on mail-order buying. The second will appear in an early issue.

MY home is in the north end of Kenwood, near Forty-third street. I have bought groceries for many years from one of the merchants on that street. He extends me credit for a week or two, rather, I pay my bills contracted with him at the end of each week as a convenience. We very seldom get groceries "any other place. I think our grocer probably ranks with the average in Chicago. He has a fairly good store and a service which is satisfactory to us.

It had been my belief, however, that groceries were costing me more than they should cost. This was my attitude when I noticed in one of the Chicago papers, an advertisement of the Larkin Company. This advertisement told of the 350 food products, etc., sold direct to the consumer from the Larkin factory. The statement was convincing enough to cause me to make a trip from Kenwood to Ashland avenue to inspect the products which were advertised.

Better Than She Anticipated

First impressions count. My first impression of the Larkin plant was favorable. The new building is imposing. It was not completed, but on the second floor was the display rooms in which all goods were shown. There, too, were the premiums offered by the company. Visitors walked into a very pleasant reception room where catalogues were shown. There was nothing for me to show me about I had the impression that visitors probably would be mostly from what we know as the poorer districts of the city, but I was mistaken. Middle class women, like myself, who were trying to reduce their living expenses were in a majority. They were impelled by the same thing that took me there. I talked with women who had been buying from Larkin for months and in some cases years. I have no idea the practice was so widespread. Truthfully, I had misgivings before I went there, that I would make with people entirely of another class. But if anyone thinks as I did, a visit will change the impression.

Intelligent Women Explain Plan

To me the Larkin system was entirely new. It was very carefully explained to me. A very intelligent woman who first had been a secretary of one of the Larkin clubs, then an organizer of the clubs, because of her success in forming clubs, took me in hand. She piloted me through the store, showing goods and premiums alike, answering every question and enthusing me over the plan of buying by quoting from her experience.

The goods are on display in a big room around the sides of which the premium goods are very attractively displayed. To my right were various rooms fitted out with furniture that is given away by the Larkin Company as premiums. A thing that struck me immediately was the good taste displayed. The furniture was not garish and loud, but in remarkably good taste. There were shown pieces I would like to have in my own home, and I am particular. A parlor, hall, dining room, bedroom, kitchen, library were fitted out. Each piece of furniture had on it a neatly printed tag showing the price for its purchase as a premium, the retail price at which you might buy the furniture outright also was quoted.

Chiffonier Attracts Her Eye

One piece in particular I noted because I have long had it in mind to buy. That was a mahogany chiffonier which I looked over very carefully. I could buy it for $25 outright or earn it as a premium.

Rugs, kitchen utensils, waists, suits, cloaks, jewelry, everything I could wish were shown in that display room. As I have stated, it all was in good taste. Some of it I would not select for my personal use, but I have seen similar things in the State street stores. I thought the assortment a very complete and attractive one.

I was presented with a number of pieces of literature. In an envelope marked "This is the CUT-PRICE BULLETIN which will save you $50 to $150 a year" was a grocery catalogue called "The Larkin Cut-Price Grocery Book." On the book was this inscription:

The Free Trial Proposition.

"THIRTY DAYS TRIAL. Your Money Back If You Want It. You run no risk whatever when you deal with us. We allow thirty days to say whether or not you like the goods. If you don't like them, we will remove what is left, refund your money for the entire amount, freight and delivery charges included, and urge you nothing for the products and commodities used in a reasonable trial."

That seems to me a very fair proposition. I believe the company will do what it says. I have my doubts whether "Jim," my grocer, would do the same.

The groceries were well displayed, in marked contrast with Jim's display. They were in glass cases. Packages were opened and must send cash with my order. She urged me to form a club and showed me that as secretary I would be entitled to added privileges. She explained that club orders could be made larger and sent to one address, reducing delivery charges. If I was a secretary the goods would come to me and the other women members of my club could gather at my home and get the goods.

Some Clubs Are Social Affairs

"Why, some of the women make social affairs of their clubs," she said. "They have regular weekly or monthly meetings, enjoy tea or refreshments and place their orders at that time for the ensuing period. They enjoy the meetings wonderfully."

"Will you deliver the goods to me?" I asked.

"We do not, but the Brink's express will deliver a package to any point in the city for 25 cents," she said. "We are considering establishing a delivery system for Chicago, but until we do we will use city express companies. We pack the goods very carefully so there will not be any trouble," she added.

I went over the grocery catalogue with her. In every case the price the retailer charges is given and then the Larkin price. She said the latter was the same price paid wholesale by the grocer. Here is one of the statements in the catalogue:

"These are prices your grocer pays."

"If I make up my order at the lower prices in the catalogue I am not entitled to a premium, but if I buy at the regular retail price I have my choice of premiums wherever I desire, to exercise it, at a specially low price.

Statements of the Larkin Idea

I took the book home and have studied it. This paragraph struck me as being thoroughly logical:

"The grocery jobber, wholesaler and retailer add about 100 per cent to the price of food commodities without adding ANYTHING to the value. They don't do us any good. In fact, they would hurt if they sold our products, because they would make our prices needlessly high. Why not sell to families direct from our factories? We will save those who use our goods a great deal of money and we will build a reputation for Larkin foods which are always fresh and pure.

"So, we steered clear of all middlemen. What we did not make we bought from first hands only.

"We made grocery prices so low that no retail dealer COULD compete with us."

I find quoted two classes of goods, "Larkin Products," manufactured by the company, and "Larkin Commodities," which the company buys in large quantities and sells again on a small margin. The catalogue tells me I can buy the former for one-half the usual price and the latter at savings of from 15 to 40 per cent.

With each $10 or more of groceries I can buy 25 pounds of sugar for $1, which is about seven pounds more than "Jim" will sell me. The sugar offer attracted my attention at once.

Free Products Are Disappointing

I gave my name and address to one of the women and she handed me a package of goods the company gave away. In it I found a package of short length macaroni which was marked, "retail price, 15 cents," and a package of chocolate pudding.

Frankly, I will say that the macaroni did not look attractive to me. Neither did the pudding powder. But I believe they are just as good as "Jim" sells me for the same price. At least, I am willing to take a chance.

So I have placed an order with the Larkin Company for $10 worth of groceries. I am ordering the first lot at the lowest price and am not taking premiums in furniture, though later I think I shall take the chiffonier. I have priced one that looks about the same at one of the State street department stores, and find it will cost me $25.00. I believe I will get as good treatment from the Larkin Company as Jim can give me and save about half on what I am buying from him.

Note → The Modern Grocer is an independent paper published in the interests of the retail grocery trade. Its purpose in printing this article is not to boost Larkin Co., but to show its grocer-subscribers just what it is about Larkin Factory-to-Family Dealing that makes such a strong appeal to the average woman.

The writer of this article seems very earnest and sincere.

As she is not yet aware that the Larkin idea of "save all cost that adds no value," is nowhere more carefully applied than in the manufacture of its catsup, she is at first evidently disappointed in the less gay (though substantial) appearance of the Products given her as samples. She very fairly admits, however, that when she tries them she will probably find them just as good as her own grocer sells.

Abraham Lincoln said: "You Can't Fool All the People All the Time"

When I first made up my mind to give you for a nickel ten cents worth of the very best tobacco, I went to my old friends in the tobacco business and said:

"There's no reason why I can't make good by giving the American Smoker a double-value quality smoking tobacco for 5 cents. I'm sure that, as a Kentuckian, I know all about the best Burley leaf; and I know how to cure it and prepare it. I know how to buy it and I know how to make it up. How about it?"

"Fine business", they said, "but you'll have to put it up in tin boxes to make folks appreciate it."

Well, I went to work and figured on those tin boxes. I found they cost a lot of money. Considering the high quality of the tobacco, I found I simply couldn't afford that tin box and still charge only a nickel for

MASCOT
CRUSHED CUT TOBACCO

There was never one like it—for pipe and cigarette

I had to give up the tin box notion—so, in order not to cut down the quality of the tobacco in MASCOT, I decided to cut out the tin box, and use a convenient, inexpensive cloth pouch.

"People won't always be fooled," says I, "on those pretty tin boxes. If I give 'em the best tobacco, and more of it, they're not going to lose much time coming my way."

And they came and are coming, thousands upon thousands.

You can't buy better tobacco, men, I know.

Great guns, boys, you can't smoke tin; there's no reason why you should pay for it. Well, smoke MASCOT, then—it's tobacco.

STALLINGS' MEN IN GOTHAM FOR OPENING GAME

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Their training trip ended, the Boston Nationals are in this city ready, as well as they can be ready, to open the championship season with the Giants on the Polo grounds tomorrow afternoon. The Boston party, forty-four strong, arrived here shortly after midnight and made straight for their hotel. As soon as they had found their rooms, all hands beat it to the nearest all-night restaurant.

The players had not eaten since 6 o'clock, which made it a very long time for ball players to go without eating. Then they went to bed, as it was a tiresome ride from Baltimore.

Manager Stallings had his men out for practice at the Polo grounds at 11 o'clock today. On Thursday night all the extra men, the dead weight, will be sent on to Boston. Just what players will form the little party has not yet been announced.

Smith Looks Like Star.

Fred Smith, who has filled in at third base while Arthur Devlin rested up for two days, created such a profound impression that Stallings is thinking seriously of putting him on the beg in the opening against the Giants.

The chances are, however, he will allow his sober judgment to prevail and allow Devlin, who is an old-timer and used to the opening day excitement, to hold down the bag. The Boston battery will undoubtedly be Perdue and Rariden.

Devogt has turned out to be a star catcher, but he, too, might become rattled over the opening day happenings so Stallings will probably send Rariden behind the plate. Otherwise the team will be the same as the one that defeated Baltimore 4 to 0 yesterday. That game was a pitchers' battle, both Buster Brown and Roth working in first-class style.

Errors behind Roth were responsible for most of Boston's runs. Fred Smith again distinguished himself, making two phenomenal plays with the ease and grace of a Jimmy Collins. Smith is improving in his batting and may turn out to be a first-class slugger.

The Boston Nationals are in very good physical condition. Their hitting has been weak. They are improving in batting, but it will be some time before it reaches its top notch.

Roth is Fine Pitcher.

The pitching the players faced yesterday at Baltimore was the best they had faced on the trip with the exception of Walter Johnson. Roth had all that Jeff Tesreau is expected to show in the opening game if he is selected by McGraw to open the season in the box for the Giants.

Right Off the Bat

By RILEY.

YOU have to hand it to Steve Yerkes of Philadelphia. Steve made the last and deciding run of the world's series. He tallied the first run of the Pittsburg series. He likewise scored the last run of the series with Dreyfuss' gang. He was the champion batsman of that engagement. He came across with the first run at Fenway Park this season (in the Harvard game) and made the first hit. In fact, he batted out two of the four Sox hits. He hit the first and only two-bagger and walloped the first and only three-bagger.

Dye get us, Stephen?

* * *

IF we mistake not, Steve Yerkes is hammering on the door of fame every day in the baseball week. We would not drop dead of heart disease, superinduced by surprise, if Stephen batted well into the .300 class this season, or if he came through as the champion clean-up kid and the headliner in the Extra Base show. This Yerkes has a free and easy swing. When he lights on the ball it goes far and wide. He has a way of tapping the safe ones when safe ones score runs. He has discovered a route to some great big holes half way between somebody and nowhere in the outfield. They don't play far enough out for Steve's clouts, as a rule, and when they do play far enough out, he drops 'em in between.

Watch Stephen!

* * *

STEVE usually hits 'em so hard, with that long, free swing of his, that the outfielder misjudges the force behind the ball and fail to start running backwards with the tap. Instinct, inspired of the sound of bat and ball in collision, usually informs a clever outfielder about the distance the ball should go. And, after he gets a line on the direction of the smash, he turns his back and, guided by instinct, legs it out for those long-distance slams. Not so with Steve. There's so much more power in his usual behind the blow that the crash is deceptive. Yerkes has been fooling the outfielders right along these many weeks past.

* * *

HE'S versatile. His two-base crash in the third yesterday bit the base of the score board near the left field foul line. Mulholland began his chase too late and was surprised at the distance the ball traveled. On the other hand, Steve's three-bagger in the fifth dropped in a mud spot in far right field, close to the other foul line. Frye over-ran it in his effort to get under the ball or Yerkes might have been limited to two bases at that, on the muddy running paths.

* * *

YERKES has been doing these things for a long, long time. There never was much doubt of his batting capacity. It was inability to cover an acre or so in the field that "crabbed" Steve out of the world's championship class early last season. Now that he has faithfully trained to overcome that handicap, Yerkes looks like he has "arrived" with both feet, and bat, to boot. If he holds this form—which looks probable—let's see what he does alongside of J. Franklin Baker the last three days of this week.

Look out for Yerkes!

* * *

WITH Hardwick, Mulholland and Felton in the battle, the Harvard batting order looked just a bit like a football lineup.

* * *

TOPEKA, Kan., "fans" have organized a rooters' club and will raise a fund to present the team with a first-class major league pitcher. Boston National "fans" please copy. Haven't we the Boston Nationals and don't know anything about their 1913 pitching? We bet you do, the same. The Topeka scheme takes each "fan" one simoleon. The simoleon is split "fifty-fifty" half to buy a ticket for the opening game with Denver, April 18, and the other half to contribute towards the pitcher.

* * *

WHILE tomorrow is the official opening day of the season, for all we are concerned, you mustn't overlook the little curtain raiser that Charley Ebbetts stages this afternoon, when he opens his ninemouth new Brooklyn Stadium a day ahead, by grace of his brother magnates, with the Dodgers and Quakers as the attraction.

* * *

LEONARD and Foster, Stahl's recruit pitchers, gave an impressive exhibition on their first appearance in Boston. They looked far better than the recruit twirlers who have been brought home in other years.

RED SOX AND HOLY CROSS IN BATTLE TODAY

By L. R. MURDOCH.

Bill Carrigan's school mates from Holy Cross came to Boston today to give the Red Sox another work-out preliminary to the great, grand, glittering glorious pageant of tomorrow, when the White Elephants come to town to try to snatch the bunting that will soon be hanging from the center field flag pole at Fenway park.

Jake Stahl, himself an ex-rah-rah-rah boy, has played the colleges across the board in this Spring's pre-season pastiming. Six of the twelve exhibitions he has made of his Champions of all the World and of Hot Springs to Boot, have been with college boys.

It is fitting that, having begun with four cracks at his own alma mater, and then a wallop at the Champion Footballists of the World from Across the Charles, he should wind up with a slam at Bad Bill Carrigan's bunch from Worcester.

O'Brien's College Cheer.

If there were time he might take on Charley Farrell's School of Baseball Technique at Marlboro and finish up with "Buck" O'Brien's Balkan Seminary, where they teach you how to shoot the moist ball. In fact, in preparation for the latter possible engagement, "Buck's" mates composed a college yell, which they practised at Champaign, Ill., with Steve Yerkes as cheer leader:

Rah! Rah! Ba!
Rah! Rah! Rah!
Boston University!
Rah! Rah! Rah!

Connie Mack is an ardent admirer of the collegians, from whom he captured a good share of his ex-world champions Charley Ebbetts stages this afternoon, when he opens his ninemouth new Brooklyn Stadium a day ahead, by grace of his brother magnates, with the Dodgers and Quakers as the attraction.

Holy Cross, which is an enterprising institution in the athletic world and has turned loose some mighty good ball players and footballists, promised to send up a crackerjack team today, and a crowd of long-lunged rooters came along from Worcester with the collegians.

Stahl had a notion that he might give "Buck" O'Brien another work-out, but he was undecided this morning whether to use "Buck" or Hedient or Collins or Hall. The schedule now reads: Wood to pitch Thursday against the Athletics; Bedient, Friday, and O'Brien, Saturday—which may have some effect on the battery selections this afternoon.

The Sox put the Harvard bunch away, 5 to 0, yesterday, using only his "rookie" pitchers, so you may argue from that: "What chance has Holy Cross today?"

Boston Boys with Visitors.

The majority of the members of the Holy Cross nine are former Boston schoolboys, and they had many admirers in the stands who rooted hard for them to make a good showing against Stahl's team of world's champions.

Freddy Ostergren, who played second base for Holy Cross, is a former Roxbury High boy, and is one of the best young ballplayers in New England. His regular position is first base but he has been shifted to the second station in order to strengthen that important position.

TODAY'S BATTING ORDER

HOLY CROSS.	RED SOX.
J. Murray, first base	Hooper, right field.
Cawley, third base.	Yerkes, second base.
Ostergren, second base.	Speaker, centre field.
Saunders, shortstop.	Gardner, right field.
R. Carroll, left field.	Stahl, first base.
Murray, catcher.	Janvrin, short stop.
Dolan, right field.	Carrigan, catcher.
McManus, p.	Foster, pitcher.

BETWEEN INNINGS

Harvard made two hits—one each in the fourth and fifth—off Leonard. The Crimson men made the same number—one each in the eighth and ninth—off Foster. Leonard walked one, hit one and struck out six in six innings. Foster walked none, hit none and fanned four in three innings. Good for two recruits.

* * *

Janvrin jumped into the game in the seventh. He distinguished himself with three fast, clean plays, forcing Young out at second and nipping Clark and Ayres with a pair of clean pick-ups and bullet throws to first. In his one appearance at bat he made one of the four Sox hits.

* * *

Jake Stahl made two championship plays in the seventh. Foster, recovering on infield bounder near the third base line, threw to Jake on the bound, and Stahl recovered just in time to nip Alsop. On the next man's stiff bounder to Gardner, Larry threw away over Jake's head. Stahl caught the ball, but fell flat. Lying prostrate, he stretched out his long right leg and touched the bag just in time.

* * *

"Heinie" Wagner also took a bridle in the mud. Hardwick was caught off first in the fourth inning. Leonard threw to Stahl, who relayed low to Wagner. "Heinie" sat down abruptly and lost the play, although he caught the ball.

* * *

Larry Gardner was another victim of the slippery baselines. He fell on Young's fast ground drive in the third and the ball got away from him. But, by a marvelously quick recovery, he nailed his man at first.

* * *

The sun bothered the right fielders. Hooper lost Young's easy fly in the fifth. When he discovered it again, he made a quick leap, but not quite fast enough to get the ball. This went for a base hit. In the seventh he got under Wingate's fly, but it dropped out of his hands. Frye found his way under Gardner's high one in the sixth, but it came fast through the sun glare and bounded out of his mitts.

* * *

Felton would have pitched a remarkably successful game, had his control been better. He is bothered this year, as last, by letting too many of his curves run loose. But, even under the handicap, he did well for a collegian against the world's champions.

* * *

The Harvard twirler had Carrigan's measure. He fooled Bill twice where another man has fooled him, with those slow, enticing low ones, which usually cost the Sox backstop to reach—in vain.

* * *

Felton, the master of the fadeaway kick, put just as much mystery in the spiral of the baseball as on that of the football. He pitches with his right wing and kicks with his left leg, but that made no difference. Several times he fooled Young, his baseball catcher, just like he fooled those Yale football catchers—by putting them "where they ain't."

* * *

Henriksen received more applause than any of the other Sox when he pinch-batted for Leonard in the sixth. The crowd remembered when he tied up that deciding game of the world's series, while playing a similar role.

ARMORY HEADS TO OPEN CLUB AT THE ARENA

By JACK CONWAY.

A new boxing club will be opened at the Boston Arena within a few weeks. This information was given to the writer today by a person who is in close touch with both the Arena management and the boxing promoters.

The club will be operated by practically the same men who had control of the Armory A. A., which has been closed since a year ago last November. It is stated that they have professed a new charter and will not hold their shows under the name of the Armory A. A., as they still believe that there is a chance of securing suitable quarters for a permanent boxing club in this city.

The new club plans to stage boxing contests during the Summer months and in the early Fall. It will, of course, be necessary to close the club the first of November in order to give way to the ice skating and hockey season. The officers of the new club are confident that they will have suitable quarters to move into by that time.

Joe Rivers Beats Leach Cross in Thrilling Battle

NEW YORK, April 9.—Joe Rivers of California outpointed Leach Cross of New York in a hard-fought 10-round bout which went the limit at St. Nicholas A. C. Rivers earned the honors in the most of the rounds. Neither boy scored a knockdown.

At the end of the whirlwind battle Rivers left the ring with his lips slightly cut and puffed. Cross had a slight bruise under his left eye. These were the only visible marks of the strenuous session of fisticuffs. It was a fine exhibition of boxing, and both men showed wonderful ability to assimilate heavy punches. Both started off to fight fast from the first bell and kept it up until the last blow was struck.

Rivers carried the battle to Cross at nearly all stages of the fight. He measured his punches with greater accuracy and rarely ever missed. Cross, who fought in a crouching position, at different times, in the first bout, did not shine as well as Rivers as a boxer.

LELAND NINE WILL BATTLE IN JAPAN

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., April 9.—Leland Stanford Junior University announces that it will send a baseball team to Keio University, Japan. Chick to Battle Moriarty in Go at New Bedford

Joe Chick, who defeated Jimmy Quinlan in six rounds at Gloucester the other night, is not going to remain idle. He has been matched to meet Jimmy Moriarty, the sturdy Lowell welterweight, in a twelve-round bout at New Bedford on Friday evening.

Both of these men are hard hitters, and the contest is sure to be a fast and bitter affair. Moriarty has had more experience than Chick, but the latter is confident that his hitting power will enable him to win. The bout has been advertised as for the welterweight championship of New England.

POEHLER BEATS CHRIS IN GAME FOR PIN TITLE

By J. P. MURPHY.

Not getting up once, Paul Poehler went over the New Long and bowling title for keeps in his match against Tom Christopher at the New Boston alleys last night, and he got it and also found himself several hundred dollars richer as the result. Joe completes were of the twenty strings giving him 2216 pins, while Christopher totaled 2043.

The match lacked the excitement of the previous night, but there were plenty of features to make it interesting. It was simply a walkaway for the Dutchman, and the more he showed the better he seemed to get. Christopher did not do nearly as well as he did on the first night, but he got only 986 for his total, against 1,111 for Poehler.

Poehler rolled a much smoother game than on the opening night. He got away to better starts. He did not hit the pins as full, and the continual cutting which marked his start on the previous night was also missing. He seemed very confident and was as cool as an iceberg.

Christopher did not start the "pin" that he had in his last two games first night, and at the end it seemed as though he could not care, as he took that the lead he had up his opponent could not be overcome.

The complete score for the twenty strings is as follows:

Christopher—[illegible] 91, 93, 95, 105, 98, 118, 125, 97, 100, 104, 116, 97, 111, 107, 95, 106, 95, 100, 95—2043.

SIXTEEN HARVARD BASEBALL PLAYERS ON TRIP SOUTH

Sixteen, and possibly eighteen, Harvard players will make the Southern trip next Friday, and the presence of Coach Sexton, Coach Reeves of the freshmen, the manager, the assistant manager and the trainer will increase the party to twenty-one or twenty-three individuals, as the case may be.

The players who will make the trip are as follows:

Infielders—Captain Wingate, Clark, Tomes and Ayres.

Outfielders—Harvick, Mulholland, Astop, Hallgan and Sargent.

Pitchers—Pitou, Fye, Hardy, McDonald and Hitchcock.

Catchers—Young and Osborne.

It is also likely that Phillips, the third baseman, and one other pitching candidate will be carried.

HUFF PLANS FOR COLLEGE LEAGUE

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., April 9.—George Huff, director of athletics of the University of Illinois probable president of a college baseball league, said here:

"The plan seems to have great possibilities. The fact that the American League, through President Johnson, is interested, means a great deal. There is no idea of transplanting college varsity players, but if the Summer baseball ban is enforced, such school will certainly have ineligible players."

A Great Scientific Discovery

Of Exceptional Interest to All Readers and to Sufferers of Stomach and Liver Disorders, Constipation, etc.

The search for a remedy, merely for the treatment of bowel disorders led the firm of Anderson Sanitarium to the discovery of a combination which would prove satisfactory, mild and gentle.

The result was the discovery of "Hunyadi Janos Pills," a new combination designed to act upon every organ of the body at nominal—not upon what is known as a drug. A statement of the laxative principle of Nature in which the liver, stomach, kidneys, intestines and nervous system play an important part. Any single substance does not exist which can actually whip your entire system. Both a drug and a laxative. Hunyadi Janos Pills are a combination. You don't need to be told as to the pills. One or two pills at night are enough. No griping. Not a bad taste. You'll see for yourself as the months go. School Baseball Teams Commence Long Campaigns

With over a dozen games on the schedule for this afternoon, the school baseball season will be ushered in without the usual parades and flag-raising of the big leagues, but with plenty of enthusiasm.

Several practice games were played last week with the teams showing exceptionally good form, but today is considered the first "big" day of the 1913 season.

The feature attraction of the day will be the game to be played at the Locust Street Grounds, South Boston, between English High and Medford High. These teams have met in an early game for the past few years and have become great rivals and much interest is attached to the game.

Somerville High will open its season with the Cambridge Latin nine as its opponent in Somerville and this game is also attracting much attention. Somerville will be minus the services of its captain, Johnny Mitchell, and this will weaken the team at third base.

Coach Rapp Good of the Malden High team has done a lot of work with his squad in training and he expects the boys to make a fine showing this afternoon when they line up against Woburn High at Malden.

Brookline High plays Noble & Greenough at Brookline. Rindge Technical will meet Belmont High, Melrose will have the Museum of Fine Arts as its opponent at Melrose, Lynn Classical will meet Swampscott High at Swampscott, Concord High plays Lasalle at Concord and several other games are on the schedule.

The championship of the Eastern League rifle shooting competition was won by the Deering High School of Portland, Me.

Big International Track Meet Sure to Take Place

By J. O. JOHNSTONE,
(Champion High Jumper of United States and Canada)

THE question as to how the invitation to the Oxford and Cambridge teams for an international meet with Harvard and Yale should be worded is still unsettled. The three important questions to be decided are, the date of the meet, the binding or provisional invitation concerning return meets, and the number of men in each event. It is expected that a final agreement will be reached within a week.

TED KOCH, a member of the long distance relay team at Harvard the past Winter and who had blood-poisoning this Spring, has recovered. He is practicing every day and may be strong enough to compete by the time the intercollegiates are held. Koch is a valuable "H" man.

* * *

THERE have been reports about the University of California wanting to compete in the Eastern intercollegiates. It is, however, up to the Eastern colleges to decide whether they will admit the Westerners to the games. It would be a fine addition and would encourage meets between the colleges of the East and the West.

Hunting a Husband

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

Beatrice Minor Is in Grave Doubt at to the Man She Loves Most, and Calls Up Helen.

BEATRICE MINOR had little leisure to think of her various love affairs during the first few days after her return to her city apartment. While Mary had the place thoroughly cleaned and set to rights, it always takes a little time to get settled after an absence of many weeks, and, moreover, there were clothes to be bought.

This thought occupied much of the widow's mind. Within two or three days after leaving Pleasanton she received the money due her from the company in which her burned property had been insured, and with this money she shopped fast and furiously. She was glad—secretly—that her clothes had been destroyed by fire, as few of them had been as pretty as the new ones she selected.

There was also a pleasure in getting entirely fresh outfits for the children.

Jean, true to the instinct of her sex, found joy in accompanying her mother on her shopping tours and in trying on pretty hats, dresses and coats. Not so Jack. He disliked the whole business, he declared. Of course, he was glad to get several new suits and he wanted to "look as well as the other fellows," but shopping bored him, and he longed for the freedom of the bygone Pleasanton days.

"Sick of the City"

"Gee!" he sighed. "I'm sick of this old city already. I wish we lived in the country."

His depression was lightened by the information imparted by his mother one morning as they sat at breakfast.

"Kiddie," she said, "I have a letter from Mrs. Robbins and she tells me they are all coming back to town in a week. Isn't that fine?"

"Good!" exclaimed Jack and Jean. "Then we will see Dick and Dora often."

Their mother paid little heed to their chatter, for she was reading another letter. This had been posted from a Western town.

Beatrice, unfamiliar with Keith Lacy's handwriting, had not thought for the moment that the second epistle was from her deported suitor. It had been written on the train, and was short. It told her tint as the distance between the writer and the reader increased he thought more of her and of his love for her. "I will live on the hope of what your answer will be when I return next month," he added.

Beatrice sighed softly as she laid down the letter. She had not thought of a possible husband during these busy days just passed, and had been too tired at night to reflect on the future. Now Keith's affectionate letter brought the whole situation back to her.

She appreciated with a sudden qualm that she must soon face the old problems, and she was more doubtful than ever before as to whether she loved this ardent young man. She thought of Dr. Haynes—she felt no thrill. But when her mind turned for an instant to the bandaged and swathed form she had seen carried past her door less than a week ago her heart gave a sickening throb.

Yeager in Town

What did it mean? she asked herself. Did she care more for Paul Maynard than for all those others, or was she only remorseful because she had not trusted him fairly? She had had no way of learning what his condition was since his sojourn in the hospital, but she determined suddenly to know.

Dr. Yeager was probably in town somewhere, she did not know where. Well, she would ascertain from Helen to what hospital Paul Maynard had been taken, although she must not let her friend suspect how eager she was to learn of Maynard's whereabouts and his condition. To telephone to Pleasanton cost a little money—but never mind! Had she not received a lot of insurance money? and she had some of that left even yet. When that was all gone she would begin again the stupid business of economizing.

After breakfast she went to the telephone and was soon in communication with Pleasanton. She must give some reason to Helen Robbins for calling her up, so she made Keith Lacy's letter an excuse. When greetings had been exchanged Beatrice came to the point—or what she pretended was the point.

"My dear," she said, "I just called you up to tell you that I got a letter from Keith this morning—written on the train. I thought you might like to know that he was very well."

"Oh, thank you," replied Mrs. Robbins, "but you might have saved yourself the trouble of telephoning just for that and incidentally adding thirty-five cents to your telephone bill, for I got a postal myself from Keith this morning, mailed, probably, at the same time that your letter was."

"Oh, you heard from him too, did you?" asked the widow, somewhat lamely. "Then forgive me for disturbing you. But I did want to talk to you."

"That's all right," replied Mrs. Robbins. "I shall be in town in a few days, anyhow—when we can talk all we like."

Beatrice Stammers

"Yes, of course, replied Beatrice. Then, as there was a moment's silence, she made an effort to speak naturally, failing signally.

"Oh, Helen," she stammered, "what do you hear from all the people we saw so much of this Summer?"

"Nothing from the women," said Helen somewhat stiffly. "You know, I suppose, that Robert Maynard's wedding-cards are out, and, of course, you know all about Dr. Haynes, and also that Uncle Henry is out West again."

She stopped. Beatrice felt herself flush with embarrassment. But she would not be foiled now.

"And what about—about—Paul May-nard?" she burst forth desperately.

"Why, Beatrice!" was Helen's annoyed exclamation. "You know perfectly well that he is in a hospital in Boston."

"What hospital?" asked Beatrice, her voice quivering with excitement.

Helen named the hospital coldly, then fired a verbal bomb.

"I suppose, Beatrice," she said cuttingly, "that you really called me up to talk about other people, rather than to tell me about my poor Keith."

"Oh, Helen! How can you say such a thing?" protested Beatrice, amazed.

"Because," was the cold reply, "you evidently do not care as much for that dear brother of mine as you do for—someone else!"

With which enigmatical remark the conversation ended.

Secret of Success

"Pluck, pluck, pluck, first, second and thirdly, my boy, is the secret of success," said Mr. Magnate, the millionaire.

"Ah!" sighed the pale, over-worked clerk. "I guess so, but I wish you'd tell me your method of plucking."

Man Exterminates the Wild Beasts One by One

The result of the day's chase in the forests of the wealthy Archduke Joseph of Austria.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

IF it were possible to have a motion picture summing up, say in an hour's time, the changes that the living forms inhabiting this globe have undergone since the earliest ages, the exhibition would be astonishing beyond all words.

There would flit before our eyes an endless procession of strange beasts, gradually emerging from the waters and overspreading the land, and taking on the shapes rendered necessary by alteration of environment and change of the conditions of life.

There would be the first amphibians, living indifferently in water or in air; then the great reptiles, of extraordinary size and ferocious appetite; next the flying dragons, birds with reptilecan claws and teeth; then the huge monsters of tertiary time; and finally man with his early companions, the mammoth and the mastodon.

At every stage it would be seen that the animals fed upon one another, and that some species were thus driven into practical extinction, out, until the arrival of man, there would be no evidence of the interference of any agency above the ordinary tendencies of nature.

But man, with his active brain, would be found taking a hand, on his own account, and upon a systematic plan, in the future evolution of the life of the globe. He would be seen gradually altering the character and the forms of various animals by subjecting them to his rule. Then domesticated animals would first make their appearance, and the nature of the horse, the ox, and other creatures, would undergo a remarkable change under his guidance.

And when the vast film had been unrolled almost to its end, man would be seen driving into extinction many animals which, but for his arrival, might have continued for ages to inhabit the earth. This would be, in many respects, the most dramatic part of the exhibition.

Even when he had no better weapons than bows and arrows, and spears and traps, man succeeded in exterminating from Europe the wild ox, the terrible aurochs. With the invention of modern guns he has carried on the slaughter until animals of the greatest interest, many of which could have been rendered harmless without being driven out of existence, have rapidly disappeared.

When we read accounts of the vast herds of buffalos that less than a century ago roamed over the plains and hills of the far West, numbering probably millions in the aggregate, it seems impossible that a few individuals, kept in menageries, and on special reservations, are all that now remain.

Lions and tigers, though still numerous in some regions, have been decimated by their human hunters, and the time is undoubtedly coming when they will almost have disappeared. There is something in the mere presence of man and his works which seems inimical to many of the most interesting wild animals. They flee from him panic-stricken. The changes brought about in the face of nature by his activities are fatal to them. They cannot alter their ways of life rapidly enough to meet the new conditions which the presence of man imposes.

The elephant, on account of its teachability and its capacity for useful work, will probably long survive in certain Eastern countries as a domesticated animal, but its wild life is nearly at an end. Its precious ivory tusks are nature's fatal gift to it.

The great grizzly bear has almost disappeared, and every animal clothed with a skin that can be turned into a rug or coat is remorselessly hunted down.

When the animals fought one another to extinction they did it only for the sake of food. But the ingenuity and the ever-growing wants of man have made him a more terrible enemy, because he seeks from his victims not only food, but clothing, and soft furs for himself and his mate, and elegant rugs for his floors, and horns and antlers to adorn his walls, and feathers to make gay his festival scenes.

He makes the animals that have not brains enough to match his cunning pay with their lives and the garniture that nature gave them for his selfish indulgences, his luxurious tastes, and his joy in the exercise of the irresistible powers of destruction with which his superior intelligence has furnished him.

But there is one wild animal, the fearless boar, which has defied, with unusual success, the destructive propensities of man. In its forest fastnesses it presents a gallant picture of bold independence and sturdy self-reliance. Its superb fighting qualities may even save it from utter extinction, for merciless as man is, he admires a brave foe and in India a species of boar is furnished with food in order that its numbers may be maintained. But this is only done for the sake of "sport," the sport of "pig-sticking," and the care that the animals get is the same that was given to the gladiators in ancient Rome.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HE NEEDS SNUBBING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A young woman with whom I am employed is desperately in love with the same young man with whom I am in love.

He shows each of us the same attention, and when the two of us are together he treats us alike; but still, when he takes me out alone, he tells me that I am the only girl he loves, and when he takes my friend out he tells her the same.

Shall I refuse his attentions, as I am very fond of the other young woman and would willingly give her the chance if you so advise?

UNDECIDED.

HE is the most detestable of all creatures—a man flirt. You will do your friend no kindness by giving her a clear field, since to win him means only to win trouble.

Why not put your two heads together and devise some scheme of teaching him a lesson?

GIVE EACH OTHER TIME

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am placed in a very embarassing position. I have bestowed on a very nice girl an honorable love, and feel positive that it is either her or none. She does not reciprocate, but likes me only as a friend, and will not give me any hope for the future. Shall I persist or desist?

DETERMINATION.

YOU sign yourself "Determination," and ask such a question?

I do not see the embarrassment of your position. If you have given your love to a nice girl, the experience is good for your moral growth though she may not accept you.

If you wait her persist.

DON'T DO IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl seventeen years of age, and am in love with a man four years my senior. We have been going together for the last seven months, and he has never had the opportunity or occasion to present me with a gift of any kind. His twenty-first anniversary is now approaching, and I would like to present him with a signet ring.

H. O. L.

THERE is no occasion for making him a gift of any kind, and if there were, you should not give him a ring. Write him a note of congratulation.

The Chief Advantage of Crawford Boilers

over other boilers is that they heat the houses they are rated to heat;—you don't have to get the "next larger size." A fact worth noting.

These Boilers give more heat per pound of coal than others and cost less in repairs. They are simplicity itself in operation, are guaranteed for zero weather efficiency and save fuel and labor.

There are no packed joints, sheet iron parts or brick linings in these Boilers, and the "Heat Ribs" cast on the interiors are found in no others.

They are a gilt edge investment for those who want heat and plenty of it at the minimum of expense and care.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

Daysey Mayme as a Comforter

DAISEY MAYME APPLETON used so much cold cream her face slid off the pillow at night.

She rolled on the floor till she acquired the dexterity of a rolling pin moving back and forth over pie crust.

She stood on one foot like the storks amateur painters paint.

She attended all the meetings of her Browning Club, that she might get suggestions from the women who discussed "The Ring and the Book" two minutes, and methods of keeping the waistline from the armpits for two hours.

She wrote learned articles on "The Unjust Discrimination Against Our Sex," in which she lambasted nature, which made it possible for men to become contortionists—men, who never have the problem of fastening a waist down the back—and denied this gift to women.

Patient and Faithful

She has done more than any other woman to reduce the middle a spread Venus proportions. So patient and faithful has been her research no one will be surprised that she has at last discovered a method of retaining the lines and suppleness of youth that is invaluable.

It is prescription No. 5587. Try it, dear sister, and you will be rewarded by a youthfulness that will enable you to keep your husband's love and wear hats twenty years your junior.

Miss Appleton's consent to an interview was given with reluctance, for the reason that she hadn't a photograph in her Easter hat to illustrate the story. She realizes that much of all our great modern reform depends on a stylish-looking picture.

She says, "I made the discovery which I have called Prescription No. 5587, one day when I had my dog for a walk. He tried to get away, and my efforts to hold him exercised every muscle in my hands and arms.

"There was a suggestion in this, and I bought a second dog. I found that my daily outings with those two dogs called into play every muscle in my limbs, my back, my hands, my arms and my shoulders. The rapid gait at which they dragged me reduced my hips; my efforts at pulling back reduced my abdomen, and the swift turns they gave my shoulders wiped out my double chin.

Gets a Third Dog

"I bought a third dog, and now when I go for a walk I regard every mix-up of my three dogs with baby carriages, small children, nurse maids, grocers' boys and other dogs, as the most splendid beauty exercise. I return home from such outings with my blood in circulation, with my spirits exhilarated and a color in my cheeks. I have ordered a fourth dog.

"I would suggest to my dear sisters that they get bloodhounds or bulldogs. They tug the hardest at the leash, and give one more exercise than Pekinese spaniels."

Every woman who appears on the streets with a string of dogs is entitled to membership in the Daysey Mayme Appleton Beauty Club. If she will call at Blowtoster's photograph gallery she will be given the privilege of purchasing a souvenir picture of Miss Appleton, showing her with her four dogs.

These pictures will also show that Miss Appleton has regained her youthful figure, and no longer has such a double chin she looks as if she were wearing her face upside down.

CHARITY BALL SETS A RECORD FOR COSTUMES

Boston's most brilliant charity ball—that at the Copley-Plaza in aid of the Free Women's Hospital at Brookline—which attracted members of leading families from New York and Greater Boston and lasted until nearly daylight, was widely discussed in retrospect in many a Back Bay boudoir today.

The ball was a tremendous financial as well as social success, hundreds of tickets having been sold, and boxes bringing $100 each. The sale of the latter added $2,000 to the fund.

Middleagedness as well as the young society people were present and joined in the Turkey Trot, Bunny Hug, Grapevine, Tango, Aeroplane Dip, Chicken Flip and other fancy dances. Some introduced Mayor Fitzgerald's "Tucker Dance."

Many Elaborate Costumes.

The decorations were elaborate and the costumes represented a small fortune. The men vied with their fair partners in representing Grecians, Chinese, Japanese, Quakers, ballet girls, Puritan maids, Norwegians, Danes, French, English, Turks and peasants.

Jay Gould, Jr., Charles M. Schwab, Jr., Hamilton Fish and other scions of wealth from New York arrived early. Percy Haughton had charge of the arrangements. He was assisted by Mrs. G. B. Fearing, Jr., of Beacon street, and Mrs. A. Hollingsworth of Hyde Park.

Among those in particularly attractive costumes were:

Mrs. Stanley McCormack, Turkish costume with trousers of purple satin, a drapery of green chiffon and turban of yellow and green chiffon.

Mrs. Wirt Dexter, old rose satin costume, bejeweled in gold.

Miss Mary Fay, short black satin skirt over underskirt of white chiffon with question marks of white on black satin.

Mrs. Alfred Codman, Turkish costume of old gold and green chiffon trousers, green stain drapery of chiffon, gold veil.

Mrs. Gordon Abbott, colonial costume of white satin and pale blue.

Ruth Anthony, Yama Yama girl.

Mrs. Nathaniel Simpkins, Egyptian maid, pale yellow and rose satin.

Historical Figures.

Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott, Turkish costume of yellow satin, turban of green trimmed with gold.

ROXBURY TOWN MEETING HITS 'L' CROWDING

Resolutions protesting strongly against the service furnished residents of Roxbury and other sections of Greater Boston by the Boston Elevated were adopted at a town meeting in the Roxbury school house, attended by Mayor Fitzgerald, Councilmen Attridge, Buckley, Ballantyne, Kenney, Collins, McDonald, Smith and Watson, School House Commissioner Logue, Street Commissioner Charles, Fire Commissioner Cole, Superintendent of Parks Shea, and Superintendent H. H. Hanson of Division 2 and Superintendent Webber of Division 1 of the Elevated.

The resolutions read:

Resolved: That it be the sense of this meeting that an emphatic protest be made to the Railroad Commissioners against the crowding of men and women together on cars of the Boston Elevated, surface and elevated, on the ground that it conduces to immorality.

Resolved: That Mayor Fitzgerald and the City Council take such action as will cause the abolition of this inhuman treatment of the traveling public of Boston; that an effort be made to compel the road to run more cars on every line in different parts of the city.

Resolved: That the streets belong to the people; that the road was granted the privilege of running cars with the understanding that its officials accommodate the people; that it was never intended to rob Peter to pay Paul, a policy inaugurated lately by officials of the road; that if the Elevated refuses to acquiesce to the demand, action be taken for the public ownership of the road.

Resolved: That the protest of the business men of Roxbury Crossing and Tremont street be heeded for better car service.

Charges of log-rolling by the City Council, made by one of the speakers, stirred several members of that body to reply that there was no such a thing.

Henry Clay Peters, president of the Progressive Club of Ward 19, said that Marcella Street Park was a resort for hoodlums.

Roger F. Scannell, Jr., president of the Roxbury Improvement Society, asked that prompt action be taken in regard to the playground which has been so long proposed for Ward 19. Mayor Fitzgerald announced that a meeting would be held at City Hall tomorrow morning to discuss the playground proposition. The Mayor said he had appointed a committee of citizens of the ward to give the Park Commissioners an idea of where the playground should be located.

Mr. Scannell entered the protest of the Roxbury Improvement Association against the car service on Tremont and intersecting streets.

Representative McGrath urged a new street between Ruggles street and Massachusetts avenue; repaving of Tremont street from Roxbury Crossing to Roxbury Crossing. Roxbury Crossing to be paved with wooden blocks; a playground near St. Francis de Sales Church, the abolition of the smoke nuisance by the electrification of the New Haven road, and the razing of the Elevated structure on Washington street. Councilman Attridge said

The Notable Feature of the New Tariff Bill

A scientific reduction of the tariff does not consist in doing nothing at all to the tariff, as was done throughout Mr. Roosevelt's two terms, nor yet in dishonestly increasing the tariff in spite of party pledges, as was done with Mr. Taft's consent and approval during his term.

Scientific reduction of the tariff consists rather in judiciously and discriminatingly modifying the tariff in a way carefully calculated to benefit all the people of the United States, be they employers or laborers, producers or consumers.

From Mr. Heard's letter to The AMERICAN, cabled from Paris, October 9, 1912.

The tariff bill just presented to the consideration of the Sixty-third Congress is a great and inspiring measure in at least three particulars, to wit:

(1) It undertakes to embody THE PRINCIPLE OF RECIPROCITY AS A BROAD AND FUNDAMENTAL POLICY.

(2) It seizes upon the INCOME TAX as a means of freeing the tariff from all consideration of revenue in those matters where tariff revenue WOULD COST—IN RESTRICTION OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY—MORE THAN IT WOULD COME TO.

(3) It shows an intelligent purpose TO ENCOURAGE AMERICAN SHIPPING through the remission of 5 per cent. of the duty on all foreign goods brought to American ports in ships built and owned by Americans and flying the American flag.

It is too early to say that the new tariff bill is in all respects what it should be. But certainly these three points will make a mighty appeal to the American people. In these particulars, at least, the bill now submitted to Congress is free from the old pendantries of politics. It breathes a new and modern spirit of commercial practicality and scientific economics.

To be scientific about a tariff, or anything else, is to cut through all the fine theories and get down to the facts.

A scientific tariff reduction is the kind of reduction that will really quicken the industries of the United States—that will help the people to keep house and pay their bills.

A tariff measure of that kind will not aim to please the professional free traders or the professional protectionists. It will not be directed against employers or against workingmen. It will not be develop the material resources of the country and to make life more livable for all concerned.

It is a homely principle—this principle of reciprocity. If the tinkers want to sell their pans to butchers, they must buy the butchers' beef and mutton.

There are trade-routes that are natural and scientific. THEY RUN NORTH AND SOUTH.

Nations that live in different latitudes generally live under different climates. They have different natural conditions, consequently they have different occupations and different products. Such being the case, it follows that both parties can expand and diversify their lives—BY TRADING.

On the other hand, the trade-routes that run east and west are generally not natural, but artificial, for nations that live in the same latitude are likely to make similar things.

During the long period of Republican rule at Washington, reciprocity with South and Central America was in the air. But it has not got into the customs of the country.

It was in the air because James G. Blaine and a long succession of enlightened public men persisted in proclaiming an economic policy of undeniable truth. But these men preached in a political wilderness—a wilderness full of the howling wolves of hungry privilege.

Again and again honest Republican leaders in Congress secured the passage of general reciprocity bills. They did it by the pressure of public demand, and in spite of the pressure of public demand, and in spite of the reluctance of the Senate. But the Senate always found a way to kill the trade treaties negotiated under warrant of these bills.

WHERE THE REPUBLICANS HAVE FAILED, THE DEMOCRATS HAVE NOW THEIR TOWERING CHANCE.

Pan-American reciprocity will be a gorgeous feather in the cap of Democracy. It was the crest of the "Plumed Knight" of Republicanism. The policy for which Blaine and Arthur and President McKinley in his last great speech pleaded—the policy defeated by special privilege under every Republican administration—may become the cornerstone of Democratic achievement.

American Boobies and English Bluff

It is to be noted as a sociological fact that distinguished men—in bunches—do sometimes act like dunderheads. The mass-action seems to addle their wits and depress their united conduct below the level of their individual wont.

An observant Frenchman, Mr. Le Bon, writing on "The Psychology of the Crowd," says something of the sort.

Such reflections must be excited in many minds by a petition to Congress on the question of Panama tolls, published by the American Association for International Conciliation, and signed in that behalf by a group of excellent gentlemen.

This petition states the case of our suffering country on the canal issue with Great Britain in terms so loose-jointed and inept that no single simpleton—acting alone and uncounselled in his own private affairs—could possibly excel the record.

These gentlemen advise the Congress of the United States to do anything or everything to please Sir Edward Grey of the British Foreign Office. They insist with a kind of breathless anxiety that the American people ought either to renounce their economic interest in the Panama Canal or else submit that interest to the uncovenanted mercy of an international court.

The upshot of the petition, in the opinion of these gentlemen, is that it is brutal of us to think of taking a cent's worth of economic advantage from the successful working of the canal, but that if we are indeed coarse enough to think of such a thing, it is, at all events, perfectly shameful not to let some disinterested tribunal pass judgment on our morals.

It is possible, of course, that the gentlemen who ask us so urgently to yield to Sir Edward Grey have not taken the trouble to read the diplomatic correspondence in the case—have not measured the height of the towering bluff of the British politician, and so do not in the least know what they are talking about. Indeed, it would be complimentary to assume that the petition of the American Association for Interna-

Dorothy Dix on Success in Marriage

By DOROTHY DIX

A MAN writes:

"Do you think I have made a success or a failure of life? I am a poor man, who works hard for a small salary. I have never been able to make much money or to give my family the luxuries of life. Sometimes they have not even had the comforts. But my home, although it has always been shabby, has been filled with peace and love and happiness.

"I had a wife who I adored and who I am sure never regretted marrying me, although from her wedding day to the day of her death her lot was the hard one of a poor man's wife.

"After her mother's death my oldest daughter, then only fifteen, took her mother's place, and has filled it splendidly ever since, growing into a noble and capable womanhood. My other children—there are five of them—are fine little chaps, healthy, hardy and intelligent, and when they see their old dad coming they swarm over him with yells of delight, for he's their best pal, and the one who helps them in their work and play.

"But I'm not one of the men who know how to make money, or get on in the world. I begin life humbly, and I shall end it humbly, and when I see other people who have been more successful than I —some of them old friends who began on the same level as myself in my boyhood—I wonder if I am not a failure. Then I look at my children and think that I have got a right to score something to my account, after all. What do you say? Am I a failure or a success?"

It all depends upon how you rate success. If you think that the dollar mark is the high-water mark of human achievement, then you are a failure. But, judging by the same standard, you would be in pretty good company. Any grafting police lieutenant could have given Abraham Lincoln points on how to become a successful money-maker. And thousands of other great statesmen have died poor, although they had in their possession knowledge of legislation that was to be enacted that would have made them millions had they been "successful politicians."

A man is a failure who cannot make a living for himself and those dependent upon him. But this living does not include diamond tiaras and limousines and imported gowns. It means just ordinary food and clothes and lodging, enough to insure a decent independence. Beyond that the making of money is no criterion of the real success of a life.

That consists in doing something for your fellow creatures, in doing something to them, and the real failures are those who, at the end of their lives, have nothing to show but a little pile of metal and a little bunch of printed paper, both worthless at the judgment bar.

Of course, the success that proclaims itself by the honking of automobile horns and the rustle of silks is of the spectacular kind that catches the public eye, but the man who is successful as a money-maker has the narrowest success in the world because he is nearly always a failure at everything else.

He's a failure as a neighbor because he has taken advantage of his superior shrewdness to those about him. The richest man in the community is always the most hated man. He's a failure as a friend, because he has always thought first of himself and because he distrusts everybody, believing everybody to be as selfish and self-seeking as he is. It is the penalty of wealth that it is friendless and lonely.

The very successful money maker is nearly always a failure as a husband. It takes all his time and thought and interest to accumulate a fortune, and he has no leisure in which to be sympathetic and tender to his wife.

Divorce is far more common among the rich than it is among the poor, and there are probably no other women, as a class, who are more unhappy than the poor rich women who are married to our great financiers.

No other woman envies a millionaires her relationship to her husband. There have been too many cases of where a man celebrates his success as a money-maker by trading off his old wife for a fresh one to match his new drawing room furniture.

The men who are the most successful financially are the greatest failures as fathers. In place of personal affection and guidance they give their children money. The result is disaster. They raise up wasters and spenders, who are a curse to themselves and a disgrace to the parents that bore them. There is scarcely a rich man who has not had to pay a son out of some shameful scrape, or to buy a divorce for his daughter. Whatever else we may envy the man who has made a great success as a money-maker, none of us envies him his children.

The man who has given his family nothing but money is a failure as a husband and a father. The man who has made his wife so happy that her heart sang for joy all her days and whose children love and cling to him and make of him their best friend, is a success, no matter if they have only had bread and butter to eat, instead of cake and ale. Such a man is a success as a citizen, because he has given to his country boys and girls who grow up into useful men and women.

The most successful man or woman is the one who has the most influence for good, and who gives the greatest uplift to those whose lives touch his or hers.

The most successful man I know is one who will leave no fortune to build memorial libraries or hospitals when he is gone, because he paid his employes such good wages and found so much poverty to alleviate as he went along that he has never been able to accumulate much money. In his old age he is comparatively poor, and he sometimes says to me that he feels that he has been a failure.

The Humorous College Course

By PERCY SHAW

(There is talk of including a course of wit and humor at Harvard.—News Item.)

WE hail the march of learning;
We hope we are discerning,
But there comes to us a rumor (Oh, we pray, 'tis nothing more),
That Harvard is debating,
A full-fledged satiating
Course of humor to be added to its varied college store.

Pray pardon us our weeping,
For we feel a sadness creeping
Like a cloud of gloomy goblins as we roam the dear old yard.
No more can we go boldly
With our Harvard spirit coldly,
Quoting gems from Kant and Livy or discussing Abelard.

Henceforth to be in fashion
We must evolve a passion
For the joke book of Joe Miller and the evanescent pun;
Henceforth our reputation
Must boast a firm foundation
On the theory and practice of the elements of fun.

'Tis bitter, classmates, bitter,
To feel that we are fitter
For the scrap heap than the hilltops, where we thought we ought to be;
To know our sons prescribe us,
With subtle quips describe us
As "those queer old grads who never won a funny Ph. D."

But wait, our turn is nearing,
Ha, won't the news be cheering
When these jokesters try their efforts on the comic magazines?
Then WE can do some laughing,
Then WE can do some chaffing
As we pass them out a quarter for a plate of Boston beans.

Woman's Superiority to Man—The Original Type of Male Does Not Recognize Her as Such, but It Is Only a Matter of Time When He Will. He Is Changing Greatly

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

IT is seldom the man of the original type believes a woman to be his superior mentally.

But the original type is undergoing a wonderful change.

Man is becoming a more humble being as he watches the development of woman.

He no longer ridicules her mental aspirations; he no longer flouts her ambitions to be something besides a housekeeper; and he no longer attempts to dominate her when she sets forth to carve out a destiny for herself according to her own ideals.

But it is seldom a man of the original type (the strong animal man of unawakened spirituality) stops to analyze the feminine nature, and to consider a woman's best interests at the cost of his own pleasure, in the possession of her.

Reveals Real Divine Man Just Emerging From Chrysalis State.

When such a man is encountered one may be certain he is of a higher and finer type than the mere outer masculine envelope indicates.

The followlog letter, written by a man who believes himself to be of very ordinary clay, reveals far more than the written words express.

It reveals the REAL DIVINE MAN just emerging from the gross chrysalis state into the winged creature.

For the moment a human being begins to put aside purely selfish considerations and to take the future happiness of others to heart, that moment the spiritual awakening has begun.

It is only a matter of time, and patience, and prayer, and the understanding of the laws of being, when such a man will develop THE REAL UNIVERSAL SPIRIT OF MANHOOD.

THAT spirit, which is to revolutionize the whole world, and create a new race of altruistic beings, who live for the good of the whole, not the benefits of the few.

Here is the letter:

"Should a girl of a mental temperament, who seeks mental pursuits rather than physical, who enters heart and soul in all she does, whose joys, pleasures, griefs and sorrows are indescribably intense, of an elevated character and purely intellectual habits and tastes, mate with one whom I would call a lymphatic temperament, one who, instead of intensity, activity, mentality, spirituality, prefers resting or sleeping, and whose mental perceptions, in contrast to hers, are rather dull and cloudy?

"It has been my good fortune to worm myself into the graces of such a young lady, and by patient, dog-like devotion and ardent, passionate wooing, to have gained dominion over her feelings; and in one of her weakened moments she promised to become my wife. We are both twenty-six years of age. After her higher feelings gained ascendancy over her animal will she be happy with me, knowing herself to be mentally superior?"

The woman who is fascinated by such a man as this (the man behind the letter; not the man who merely wrote the words) would not find it a difficult task to make her ideal materialize into what she desired him to be, if she understood the power of suggestion.

In every human being there lies the dual nature, or rather the two vibrations of one power: The coarser and the finer; the earthly and the divine; the physical and spiritual.

This man has aroused the dormant physical nature of the woman; he has made her more human.

She has aroused something akin to the spiritual in him, making the animal more divine, else he could not think so deeply of her best interests, and hesitate to take her life into his keeping.

If this woman will learn the mighty force which lies in the WORD SPOKEN IN SILENCE and quietly declare her lover to be her mental and spiritual mate, and to possess every quality which she needs to make his companionship lastingly and eternally satisfying, there can be no danger in such a union.

No union which is based on wholly physical laws of attraction can ever be happy beyond a few brief seasons. There must be a mental comradeship, there must be a spiritual sympathy, or there will be satiety, discord, repulsion, and even hatred, after the physical force has had its run.

A man who is loved by such a woman as this letter describes ought to find his greatest happiness in developing his mental and spiritual qualities, to render himself her equal and her true mate.

tional Conciliation does not proceed from mere airy empty-headedness, but is founded upon a solid ignorance of the whole subject.

To those who understand the actual course of the canal-tolls controversy there is no question at all about the facts. What the English demand is just this: They want us to confess that we have no special economic interest in the Panama Canal—except the exclusive right to lose money if the thing fails.

Sir Edward Grey has carefully explained to the State Department that he does not object to the subsidizing of our coastwise commerce out of our general treasury; but that he does object to its being subsidized out of our canal-toll receipts.

He has explained that the reason why we ought not to remit tolls on our coastwise commerce is that, by doing so, we should be getting a dividend out of our canal investment that other nations would not share.

Thus the position of the English Foreign Office is this: The Americans have an exclusive right to build the Panama Canal, to care for its perpetual up-keep and defence, and to bear all the losses that may be entailed by its physical failure, or destruction; but the Americans have no right to make a single penny out of the canal, without sharing the profit pro rata among all the nations that may choose to make use of the waterway.

Why should it be necessary to discuss a proposition so fantastic?

To submit a claim like that to international arbitration would seem to be a mockery of justice and a distinct detriment to mankind.

It would hinder the progress of peace. It would discourage diplomatic moderation and moral decency. It might open a limitless career to political impudence and introduce a universal reign of bluff.
